

Narrator Nārāyana is a writer's name.

Around 1960 I was born in Africa. My mother took care of us, my brothers, my sisters and my father. My father is a wandering storyteller. When he came, my mother gave him care and shelter. We heard of his adventures and my mother was happy.

I am as dark as Kṣṇa, but in this "I-era" nobody needs a charioteer. I travelled through Europe and I told stories. One time it was cold and I was so hungry that I could not stand anymore. Carla Drift gave me food. We started travelling together. A year ago Man Leben, Carla and I started the search for "Who are you". I'm still on the road - once I hope to arrive home again.

An outlier is a member that appears to deviate markedly from other members in society .

Narrator Nārāyana

"Who are you" is about you and me and everything around us. Are you and I connected or are we separated? How are we connected? What makes you to the person who you are and who is involved in your creation? Who are you before your birth and who will you be after your death?
Do you exist without an universe? What relationship do you have with the universe? How are you aware of yourself?
And how are others aware of you?

This search will be a way home. Our journey leads from the beginning of time until now. At the end, we will look back. We will see that everything is finished in one sigh.

Man Leben, Carla Drift and Narrator started the Odyssey to "Who are you". The Biography gives a description of the life of Carla Drift until now.
